Volunteers from Texas A&M University's Pi Kappa Phi, in conjunction with the Texas Ramp Project, recently built a wheelchair ramp for Cleve Burton, who became wheelchair bound after a car accident. The ramp is the 200th to be built by the Bryan-College Station chapter of the Texas Ramp Project since its establishment in 2009.

The Texas Ramp Project is an all-volunteer group funded by United Way, local churches, civic organizations and individuals who work to build wheelchair ramps for those in need. All referrals are sent by rehab centers, health care professionals and home health agencies.
